Bethany McLean, author of the best-selling book, "Shattered: The Untold Story of..." died early on New Year's Day. I believe she died in her sleep, while teaching a class at the University of Southern California. While most of her public life was spent on the wrong side of the river, she was a literary hero of mine from an early age. I thought the most moving part of "Shattered" was her account of her growing up and her early first kiss with her best friend. This is the love that would guide her entire life. Her father was the former chairman of GE. Her mother, the former editor in chief of Time magazine. McLean was the first Wall Street Journal reporter to report on the sexual harassment of women in the business world. So the film producer Ron Ziegler asked her to write the script for the movie "The Depression is a common emotional and psychological response to life-threatening illness. For persons with HIV/AIDS, the significant emotional and social effects of depression as well as the concomitant effects of drugs that are used to treat the infection can increase morbidity and mortality. Depression is an important factor in all aspects of the care of persons infected with HIV. Consequently, treatment of depression in this population is clinically important. It is essential for all health care professionals to understand the nature of depression in persons with HIV infection and how it relates to the other emotional, physical, and spiritual issues that can complicate the course of this disease. This review will discuss the nature of
